DETAILED ACTION

Request for Continued Examination (RCE)

The RCE filed on January 8, 2009 has been processed. A non-final follows.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112 6th paragraph

A claim limitation will be presumed to invoke 35 U.S.C. 112, sixth paragraph, if it meets the following 3-prong analysis:

- (A) the claim limitations must use the phrase "means for" or "step for;"
- (B) the "means for" or "step for" must be modified by functional language; and
- (C) the phrase "means for" or "step for" must not be modified by sufficient structure, material, or acts for achieving the specified function.

The claims fail the third prong.

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-153 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, because the claims modify sufficient structure, material, or acts for achieving the specified function.

Correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-153 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 1-52 and 151-153 recite a method. Based on Supreme Court precedent, a proper process must be tied to another statutory class or transform underlying subject matter to a different state or thing (Diamond v. Diehr, 450 U.S. 175, 184 (1981); Parker v. Flook, 437 U.S. 584, 588 n.9 (1978); Gottschalk v. Benson, 409 U.S. 63, 70 (1972); Cochrane v. Deener, 94 U.S. 780,787-88 (1876)). Since neither of these requirements is met by the claim, the method is not considered a patent eligible process under 35 U.S.C. 101. To qualify as a statutory process, the claim should positively recite the other statutory class to which it is tied, for example by identifying the apparatus that accomplished the method steps or positively reciting the subject matter that is being transformed, for example by identifying the material that is being changed to a different state.

Claims 53-150 recite a system. The system must include hardware limitations (ie. remote computer).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.

2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-153 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Virgin (6,826,542) in view of Ensel (6,493,685).

Virgin discloses the invention substantially as claimed; however, Virgin does not disclose a payment engine for electronically transmitting invoice payment instructions from the customer to the invoice or a pulling component and means installable on at least two invoicers' web sites or on web sites of entities working on behalf of said invoicers for reading each invoicers' data, packaging said invoicer's data and sending said data to said remote customer interface in response to customer data requests or remote customer interface includes a dynamic inbox for providing a list of invoicers that is selectable for display in said dynamic inbox by at least one customer. Ensel teaches account presentment comprising a payment engine for electronically transmitting invoice payment instructions from the customer to the invoice or a pulling component and means installable on at least two invoicers' web sites or on web sites of entities working on behalf of said invoicers for reading each invoicers' data, packaging said invoicer's data and sending said data to said remote customer interface in response to customer data requests (co1.3, line 40 to co1.4, line 57) and remote customer interface includes a dynamic inbox for providing a list of invoicers that is selectable for display in said dynamic inbox by at least one customer (user may select the distribution channel, which may be a consolidated list of providers in the customer's inbox--col.8, lines 14-25 and col.9, lines 20-40). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate the teachings of Ensel within Virgin for the motivation of allowing efficient customer reviewing of account information.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed January 8, 2009 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

The Applicant argues that there is no prima facie case of obviousness. In response, where a claimed improvement on a device or apparatus is no more than "the simple substitution of one known element for another or the mere application of a known technique to a piece of prior art ready for improvement," the claim is unpatentable under 35 U.S.C. 103(a). Ex Parte Smith, 83 USPQ.2d 1509, 1518-19 (BPAI, 2007) (citing KSR v. Teleflex, 127 S.Ct. 1727, 1740, 82 USPQ2d 1385, 1396 (2007)). Accordingly, the Applicant claims a combination that only unites old elements with no change in the respective functions of those old elements, and the combination of those elements yields predictable results; absent evidence that the modifications necessary to effect the combination of elements is uniquely challenging or difficult for one of ordinary skill in the art, the claim is unpatentable as obvious under 35 U.S.C. 103(a). Ex Parte Smith, 83 USPQ.2d at 1518-19 (BPAI, 2007) (citing KSR, 127 S.Ct. at 1740, 82 USPQ2d at 1396. Accordingly, since the applicant[s] have submitted no persuasive evidence that the combination of the above elements is uniquely challenging or difficult for one of ordinary skill in the art, the claim is unpatentable as obvious under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) because it is no more than the predictable use of prior art elements according to their established functions resulting in the simple substitution of one known element for another or the mere application of a known technique to a piece of prior art ready for improvement. Further, Virgin discloses an invoicing system for submitting invoices to customers. Ensel teaches presenting invoices to customers. Both are analogous art; therefore, the Examiner found basis for combination.

The Applicant argues that neither reference discloses or teaches a remote customer interface includes a dynamic inbox for providing a list of invoicers that is selectable for display in said dynamic inbox by at least one customer. In response, Ensel teaches a remote customer interface includes a dynamic inbox for providing a list of invoicers that is selectable for display in said dynamic inbox by at least one customer (user may select the distribution channel, which may be a consolidated list of providers in the customer's inbox--col.8, lines 14-25 and col.9, lines 20-40). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate the teachings of Ensel within Virgin for the motivation of allowing efficient customer reviewing of account information.
